

DOUBLE TRAGEDY SUNDAY ON THE TENNESSEE LINE.

Lee Jenkins, Merchant at Edgote, Killed By a Negro Who In Turn Attempts Suicide.

MURDER IN KENTUCKY, AND THE SUICIDE IN TENNESSEE.

Details of The Affair Which Began Over a Dime's Worth of Cheese. Negro In Clarksville Jail.

Lee Jenkins, a merchant at Edgote, Ky., aged 42 years, was shot and killed Sunday afternoon by Tom Slaughter, a negro about 22 years old. Slaughter asked Mr. Jenkins to go into the store and get some cheese and crackers for him. He and several other negroes went into the store with Mr. Jenkins and Slaughter bought a dime's worth of cheese and when it was handed to him protested that the piece was too small. Jenkins replied that he had given him his money's worth, when the negro called him a lie with an oath and Jenkins struck him with his hand. Slaughter at once jerked out a Smith & Wesson special pistol and shot Jenkins twice, a third shot missing him. Jenkins side was towards Slaughter and one ball entered his side below the heart and the other went through his pocket into his groin. Jenkins called for help and sank to the floor and was dead in thirty minutes. His brother, Oscar Jenkins, heard the shots and ran out of his house just as Slaughter ran over the Tennessee line a few steps from the store and jumped over the fence into a field. He attempted to follow, being unarmed, and the negro turned and shot at him. In the meanwhile Douglas Nichols had secured a gun and horse and cutting the wire fence dashed after the fleeing negro and soon overtook him in W. D. Elliott's field and called to him to throw up his hands. Slaughter declared that he would die before he would be taken and as Nichols came up turned his pistol on himself and shot himself twice under the chin, making wounds believed to be necessarily fatal.

Slaughter lived at Tom Jones' and was regarded as a dangerous, bad negro.

Mr. Jenkins was a man of excellent character and a widely popular citizen. He was a widower, his wife having died two years ago. He leaves no children, but a step-daughter, Miss Ella Harris, is a pupil of Bethel Female College.

Mr. Nichols left Slaughter for dead in the field and some time later some Clarksville turnpike hands took him to their camp and Dr. Rollon was sent for. Later he was taken to Clarksville by a deputy sheriff. He was in jail there yesterday and his wound is not as serious as it was first thought to be. If he recovers, he will be brought here, as the crime was committed in this state.

MCLEAN DEFEATED

Cumberland University Wins by 50 to 35.

In a hard and hotly contested game of basketball at Lebanon, Tenn., Saturday, Cumberland University defeated McLean College 50 to 35. The teams were pretty evenly matched in height and weight. McLean played an excellent game, but were far outclassed in teamwork and in passing the ball. Cumberland played a great game, their passing being exceptionally fine. Ebin and F. Burnett played a great game for McLean. For Cumberland, Burns and Garner played perhaps the best game, though no one in particular starred, teamwork and passing being the distinguishing features.

MCLEAN COLLEGE HAS THIRD DISASTROUS FIRE.

Main Building Known As Ben Rash Memorial Dormitory Is Totally Destroyed Friday Night.

THE LOSS IS $20,000 WITH $6,000 OR $7,000 INSURANCE.

Hasty Arrangements Being Made To Restore The Cooking Department and The School Will Be Continued.

Friday night soon after eight o'clock fire was discovered in the roof of the main building of McLean College, known as Ben Rash Memorial Hall. The entire upper part of the building had evidently been burning for some time, as the whole roof was ablaze.

This building contained the classrooms, gymnasium, chapel, etc., and Prof. and Mrs. L. E. Foster and Miss Louise Jackman, of the faculty, roomed there. It was a three-story brick structure, very imposing in appearance and crowned one of the highest elevations in town.

To this elevation was due its total destruction, for the water pressure, which is furnished from the water company, was entirely too light to avail much. The fire started either from the furnace in the art studio, in which some china was being baked or from a defective electric wire, more probably the latter. It was breaking through the roof when discovered and the building was doomed from the first. The loss is about $20,000, with $6,000 or $7,000 insurance. A college entertainment had just started when the alarm was sounded.

In the absence of Fire Chief E. H. Hester, who is in California, Assistant Chief E. P. Fears was in charge of the fire company and they did all that was possible with a meagre supply of water from one or two hose lines. It was only by heroic work that the firemen were able to save the girl's dormitory, which stands near the burned building. The boys' dormitory was so far removed, it was never in danger.

The south wing in the rear had been partially saved when about 11 o'clock a valve burst at the pumping station entirely shutting off direct pressure and the standpipe pressure was not sufficient to throw water with any force at such an elevation. After that all that could be done was to save the girls' dormitory near by.

The College is under the management of Prof. A. C. Kuykendall and Prof. H. Clay Smith and a full corps of teachers.

This same building was burned on November 2, 1905, and once about 21 years before that. After the last fire it was endowed with $10,000 by James R. Rash, of Earlington, and was named for his deceased son. The school paid off the last of its indebtedness about a year ago, and was enjoying the most successful period in its history.

Both the boys' and girls' dormitories were full, a total of about 160 boarding pupils being enrolled.

A large part of the personal effects and furniture was gotten out but much was destroyed, especially the pianos.

There was but little wind and the fire burned very slowly and with an adequate water supply the building might have been saved.

The First Fire.

Sunday afternoon Feb. 24, 1884, fire originated in the ell, over the dining room. The front part of the building was destroyed, the loss being estimated at $13,000. The insurance was $9,000. The school was under the management of Maj. S. R. Crumbaugh and Prof. B. C. DeWeese, with 12 girl boarders. The session closed abruptly and the building was restored for the fall session.

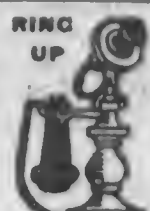

The Second Fire.

Thursday morning Nov. 2, 1905, the same building was again gutted, most of the walls remaining standing. The fire was discovered in the roof. The building had 21 girl pupils in it at the time. The female department was suspended until the fall session and the girls went to their homes. The loss was estimated at $20,000 with $6,200 insurance. Prof. A. C. Kuykendall was then and is now the Principal. The college was restored and improved by fall, being aided by several large endowments.

FLANDERS "20" DELIVERY CAR

A Studebaker Body on the Famous Flanders "20" Chassis

Price $800—f. o. b. Detroit

ARE you one of the merchants who have concluded that the day of the delivery car is here? Have you been convinced that to the enterprising dealer horse delivery is a thing of the past? We hope so. The deeper you go into the problem, the more clearly you will see it.

Prestige and lowered costs have had their say and they are what count. Efficiency—that's the story. Whether you are a small dealer or large, the question is coming right up to you. Which shall it be—Horse or Automobile? Have you realized that on the face of it the case is all in favor of the automobile, not the horse? A car is faster, stronger and tireless. Settle the cost question, and there is no argument. We want you to consider this; you must consider it, for your competitor surely will.

This isn't our belief alone. You merchants have told us the same story many times.

THE FLANDERS "20" IS READY

Today you have your answer. The Flanders "20" is the car. In it are combined handsome appearance, economy and all service at a fair price. The Flanders "20" is everything a delivery car ought to be. You need it. And when you buy it, you are going to be immensely satisfied.

"Six bottles of Electric Bitters" he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used." So they help everybody. Its folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it. Only 50 cents at all druggists.

CURFEW LAW FOR HUSBANDS URGED

Chicago, Feb. 2.—A curfew law for husbands was advocated by Robert B. Glenn, former governor of North Carolina, in a speech here last night on the subject "The Country's Need of Sterling Men and Women." The man who stays away from his family at night is the most contemptible creature on earth," he said. "I wish we had a curfew law for husbands—a law that would make every husband stay at home from 8 o'clock in the evening until 6 o'clock the next morning. A man's place is at home with his wife, helping to train the children in the way they should go."

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Hopkinsville People Know How to Save It.

Many Hopkinsville people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer or remain in danger. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has cured thousands of kidney sufferers.

The following statement leaves no ground for doubt.
Claud Mitchell, farmer, Cadiz, Ky., says: "For three years I suffered from disordered kidneys, the secretions being too frequent in passage and causing me to arise often during the night. When stooping or lifting, I suffered from sharp twinges and was also caused much annoyance by headaches and dizzy spells. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally brought to my attention and I procured a box. I soon found relief and continued using them until a cure was effected."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

COL. E. H. GREEN GIVES HIS VIEWS ON WOMEN

New York Females Painted as a Worthless Lot by Bachelor Son of Richest Woman.

San Francisco, Feb. 2.—Col. Edward Howland Green of Texas, son of Hetty Green of New York, arrived here, heralded as "a man who wants to marry a woman, not a clothes horse."

"Children are the last thing they want," he said of New York women. "None of them know how to cook or sew. And they would deny that their good old homely grandmothers knew how to wash clothes. 'If a fashionable New York woman went up Fifth avenue with a ring in her nose, the jewelers could not supply nose rings fast enough to supply the demand. They want to peacock around the theaters and restaurants, so as to be seen by men not their husbands.'"

Asked if leap year might not seal his fate with some western girl qualifying on domestic lines, he said: "It may be. I'm but human."

CANNOT BE TOO CAREFUL

Advertising Men Could Not Stand for Mixing Religion With Business Announcements.

"I want," explained the advertising man, "I want a picture that has the idea of speed in it. I want it to go at a regular marathon. But it's got to be new. It's got to have a punch. I'm tired of these messenger boys and flying machines."

"Yes, I see." The artist from whom the drawing was being ordered nodded and picked up a pencil. "How about Mercury? Something like this."

He sketched, rapidly, the figure of the messenger of Olympus, winged sandals, winged cap, symbolic staff, and all. The advertising man watched him in silence, and when the tentative drawing was finished looked it over approvingly.

"Seems all right," he commented. "But what does it mean? Who's Mercury?"

"Oh, Mercury? He was the speediest thing that ever lived," the artist declared. "Mercury was the god of speed, you know."

But the advertising manager gave one long, regretful look at the sketch and shook his head.

"Too bad," he murmured sadly. "Too bad; I liked its looks, but it won't do. It won't do, young man. We can't get mixed up with anyone's religion like that."

OLD-TIME SUNDAY GOLF.

Golf appears to have given the seventeenth century Sabbath administrators of Scotland more trouble than any other form of frivolity. In the previous century the fascination of the game had Sunday license, but in the seventeenth the clubs were banned during the hours of divine worship. Here is a typical entry from the registers of Perth in January, 1604:

"The visitors report that guid order was kept the last Sabbath, except that they found some young boys playing at the gowf in the North Inch, in the time of preaching afternoon, who were warned then by the officers to compare before the session this day." The half-dozen culprits escaped with a fine of "an merk" and a public exhibition of themselves to the congregation.

Miss Oldeigh—Why, you're not rude; you're a nice little boy. Tell me, now, what did papa say?

Small Pitchers—Papa said you were an old hen.

A LEGAL CURE.

She Broke Down Entirely.

Lantz, W. Va. Mrs. Lube Talbot of this place, says: "I had been troubled with womanly ailments for some time, and at last I broke down entirely. I got so weak I could scarcely walk across the room. Thanks to Cardui, I improved right off. Now I do my housework, and am feeling well." During the past 50 years, more than a million women have been benefited by taking Cardui. You must believe that Cardui will help you, too, since it helped all these others. Cardui is a safe, harmless, vegetable remedy, a positive, curative merit, for women. At drug stores. Try one bottle. It will surely help you.

In 1912 You Will Elect a President THE AMERICAN REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THIS election is of supreme importance to you. The whole country is divided. On one side the progressive, insurgents, on the other the Conservative Standpatters. Both parties will promise many things. You will have to judge their claims and their fitness to carry them out. In these stirring times is a necessity to the busy man or woman who values being up to date. In a hundred ways its editorials, its character sketches and its timely articles will help you make your choice. It gives you the best, clearest and most accurate, non-partisan and unprejudiced news that money can buy. It is the great monthly newspaper on which intelligent people everywhere rely for their news, and you get this news almost as promptly as it is given in the great daily newspapers of the country.

Senator La Follette says: "The most timely, accurate, and impartial review of the day. I long have utilized the magazine in its current times as a valuable means of information."

Never will the Review of Reviews be more necessary than next year the joy of the morning. Since the earliest dawn Phil Craig had been sauntering through the least frequented ways, peering into gardens, noting the creeping light, the melting shadows, now and again sketching roughly some bit that appealed especially. He had come to the village, from years of study abroad, to rest, he had told himself, not to work—yet here was work laying hold on him in the very outset.

Looked the incarnation of Youth.

He stood ambushed in the shade of a thick hawthorn. Elizabeth did not see him until as she turned half about, he called huskily: "Be still! Please! Just a minute more!" his fingers flying as he spoke. As he caught her startled look, he explained: "You are the Soul of Dawn! I want to make you immortal."

That was the beginning. Elizabeth did not tell it, even to Sara. Instead, she was gracefully, and graciously distant, when the next afternoon Phil managed to have himself fetched to the house and be properly presented. His eyes twinkled—otherwise he was as proper as she. But when they walked out in company with Sara and young Mason, his social sponsor, to view the garden beauties, he half-whispered: "You are the Soul of Dawn—and something more."

After that, Old Town village came to life with a vengeance. Phil did the most of it, fetching in autos, other young men, indeed all manner of worldly things. He refused to set up a studio, but now and again fell furiously to work under shade of a white umbrella. He made studies of all the old gardens round about, of orchard nooks, of lichened stone walls, with a dapple of shine and shadow playing upon them.

Never by any chance did Elizabeth figure in the studies. Yet she knew he made pictures of her. After a little the knowledge fretted her. Her father would not like it—of that she was sure. Neither would Billy Vance. It was all settled that she was to marry Billy, after they were both grown up. Her father thought her hardly more than a baby at nineteen—and Billy's parent had the same opinion regarding a lad of two-and-twenty.

Sara knew all about Billy, save and except his name. Sara pursued

The Spirit of Dawn

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Blood lines are far-flung. The pull of them had brought Sara from the western range, Elizabeth from remote Texas, back to a little New England village, the home town of their joint great-grandfather. The charm of it laid instant hold on them—they loved the staunch white houses, green-shuttered and set about with immemorial elms, the broad streets, the orderly elegance, the quiet of everything.

Most of all they loved Great-Aunt Martha, mistress of the old homestead. She made them welcome with a certain prim tenderness that went straight to their huddling hearts. Notwithstanding, upon the third morning after arrival, Elizabeth, who was ir-repressible, woke Sara with an impatient shake, saying:

"Think! Hard! What shall we, what can we do? We simply must do something."

"What thing needs doing?" Sara grumbled sleepily.

Elizabeth shook her again. "Bringing this place to life," she said. "It died at least a hundred years ago—don't you think it has waited long enough for resurrection?"

"I'll tell you—after I've dreamed about it," Sara mumbled, sinking back on her pillow.

Elizabeth shook her fist at her, but did not further disturb her. Instead, she hurried on her frock, tiptoed downstairs, undid the back door cautiously and slid out into the garden, the loveliest garden, in full late June bloom, overrun with spirea pinks, honeysuckle, sweet lilies and hundred-leaf roses.

Elizabeth's frock matched exactly the pink of the roses—her hair, black and silky, was braided tightly behind each ear. It was her only head-covering, so as she stood slim and virginal among the flowers at sunrise she looked the very incarnation of youth.

It was a sight to make any man's heart beat, let alone that of a young fellow, and an artist, intoxicated with her lips comically over Craig's evident enthrallment—and once said, shutting one eye: "If there was a wireless station handy I'd sent a flash to that young man down in Texas."

But she was a good fellow—much too good to spoil sport. Elizabeth meant it all for no more than sport until, all at once, with no word of warning, Billy came to Old Town.

"Couldn't help it—with home so hot, and all the things you told of going on up here," he explained. "Hay rides and boat rides, and auto rides and everything. Gee! I felt I must get into the game."

"You'll have no trouble whatever, honey," Sara said, coming up behind Billy and Elizabeth. "I'm nobody but Sara," she went on. "Let me recommend myself, though, as the latest improved variety of gooseberry. I can look 'bless you, my children,' in three languages, and seven ways at once. And you'll need to bless me—but for my vigilance Elizabeth would have been run away with long ago."

"I'd say it—even without that," Billy answered gallantly, holding both Sara's hands and looking down into her eyes. They were blue eyes, but snappy for all that. They returned his gaze steadily until Sara felt moved to say:

"You don't look Texas—not the least bit—but, then, neither does Elizabeth."

"Do not forgive us! Nobody can quite look Texas—it's the finest state anywhere," Billy answered, loyally. "But we do the best we can."

A week showed that Billy could, and did, fit in beautifully. Craig, even, could not resist him after the first two hours. Billy had a way with him, as insinuating as his gentle, slurring drawl; moreover, he was gallant, also a beautiful spender, and plentifully supplied with wherewithal to spend. His spending was without ostentation, yet he managed somehow to pay always a little more than his share. Craig swore at him inwardly over the fact. Aloud it was quite impossible.

Elizabeth exulted in Billy—as a comrade, though, not a possession. She had been too happy to think beyond the moment—she was happy still, but with underneath a sense of disquiet. Something surprised now and then, in Craig's eyes, some infection of his voice when he was off guard, formed the roots of the disquiet. Dimly she understood what she had come to mean to him—as dimly she felt that he ought to know the truth—yet she would rather die than tell him.

Thus, uneasy and perplexed, she turned instinctively to the thought of Sara. Perhaps, if Sara tried, she could make Craig forget—Elizabeth had a faith simply boundless in her cousin. A level head had Sara—with her, to will was to do. Elizabeth hoped she might will to captivate Craig—if it were put upon the ground of cousinly succor.

When woman disposes man sometimes proposes. At the end of a fortnight Billy's mind was made up. He chuckled a bit over the final making up, saying to his cigar: "We'll go home to get married—all of us—only thing to do—it'll pacify the judge and Marse Willyum."

Marse Willyum was his father, the judge, Elizabeth's. After his disrespectful comment upon them, Billy strolled over to the Howland place, smiling his most innocent smile. He found things taking place there—things unusual. In the wide dim parlor rarely opened, Craig had set up a picture nearly complete, the Spirit of Dawn—Elizabeth to the life, but Elizabeth transfigured by love and the morning. Billy looked at the picture, his eyes dimming the least bit. Then he laid a hand on Craig's arm, saying: "I must have that."

Craig shook his head—he dared not speak. Billy went on: "I'll pay you a price for it. You can't deny I have the right to it."

"I won't sell it," Craig said curtly. "Even if it were finished, nobody could buy it."

"Then give it to me," Billy persisted.

Craig glared at him—Billy smiled infinitely. "As a wedding present, you know," he went on. You oughtn't to grudge it to me and—Sara," striding to that young woman, and slipping his arm about her waist. "I meant to say I'd give you the original," he added. "But I really reckon she isn't mine to give."

"Shut up! And come out on the porch," Sara interrupted, shaking her head at Billy. "Don't you see those two can't speak until they catch breath?"

"Just as you say, boss," Billy answered meekly, but chuckling hard. Over his shoulder he saw Craig and Elizabeth locked tight in each other's arms.

Films of New York

With fifteen manufacturers of motion pictures actively engaged in business in New York, it remained for a Philadelphia concern to send a troupe to the city to photograph bits of New York scenes in response to the demand from the out-of-town exhibitors. New York sights are so familiar to New Yorkers that they fail to realize that the man in Grand Island, Neb., never has seen the famous skyline or the East River bridges, so the troupe from Philadelphia is just now adding comedy to the sights, to the huge delight of the small boys, who are quick to recognize their friends from the "movies" in flesh and blood.

Naturally.

"Is there any uplift about this new writer?" "You bet there is! He writes aviation stories."

Even at the risk of having the statement taken with incredulity, it can be stated almost positively that the peach crop has been killed. DISASTROUS BIG FIRE.

This The Third Fire.

When the fire was discovered the announcement was made to the company assembled for a recital by Miss Parrent and the crowd left the building without undue excitement and many at once went to work saving effects from the building.

The fire department soon responded and worked hard to save what it could, but the building was doomed from the first. The most effective work was in saving the girls' dormitory, which was practically connected with the main building by a low frame building between them. The firemen worked all night in the freezing weather, the men being drenched with water. Acting Chief E. P. Fears was sick to begin with but stayed with his men. John Thompson, who had a chill during the day, became so sick and had to quit at midnight. Will Turner and Substitute Fireman Herman Johnson each stuck a nail in his foot and sustained bad injuries. The walls fell about midnight, as did the large columns that had stood the other two fires. Practically all of the old walls will have to be taken down.

To Rebuild Again.

The Trustees of the College are Geo. C. Long, T. L. Metcalfe, Dr. J. E. Stone, Dr. E. C. Anderson, C. H. Bush, W. P. Winfree, J. H. Bell and Jas. R. Rash, of Earlinton.

The Board held a meeting Saturday and decided upon energetic steps to rebuild at once the partly burned ell in which the kitchen was located. The lower floor and the walls of this wing are in good condition and work has already been begun to get it under roof as quickly as possible, since the cooking for the boarding pupils was done in this part of the building. It is expected to be under roof in a few days.

The rest of the building must await financial arrangements to be put on foot as soon as possible. The furniture in the dormitory was owned by Prof. A. C. Kuykendall, who had some insurance, but not enough to cover his losses.

Prof. L. E. Foster, Miss Jackman, Miss Owsley and other teachers lost some of their effects. Only one pupil, Miss Ruby Smith, roomed in that building.

Up to the time of the second fire the school was called South Kentucky College.

McCracken Excited.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature by a member from Fayette county providing for a division of the county road fund on the pro rata basis of taxable property in the city and county.

The McCracken county Fiscal court has passed a resolution protesting against the measure, and copies will be sent to Senator W. V. Eaton and Representative Robert Scott.

To back up the resolutions, and to appear before the legislative committee when the bill is taken up for a report, the magistrates appointed a committee to represent the county, the members of which are: County Judge Aiben W. Barkley, County Attorney Sanders E. Clay, Magistrate C. W. Emery and Magistrate C. M. Koss.

Seven-tenths of the revenue of McCracken county is paid by Paducah. The measure would be of great benefit to Hopkinsville, which pays about one-third of the county taxes.

Former policeman E. P. Wilkins is now connected with the Williamson Transfer Co.

Joseph R. Wolfe has a detective position with the L. & N. Railroad at Jackson, Tenn., but will still live here.

HARDEST WINTER

Recorded here for 25 Years and the End Not in Sight.

A cold wave of great intensity visited this section Saturday night, the mercury in the government thermometer dropping to three degrees below zero. The wave was preceded by a light fall of snow. The most rapid drop in temperature of the severe winter was recorded during the late afternoon, the mercury descending ten degrees in one hour, from 4 o'clock to 5. Sunday night zero temperature prevailed again. The record Saturday night was within ten degrees of the reading Jan. 7, when 13 degrees below zero was registered by the government thermometer, as reported by Observer Randle, who has charge of the service here.

January was the coldest month since the local station was established twenty-five years ago. On the night of the 6th the mercury went down to 13 degrees below zero, on the 8th zero was reached, on the 13th twelve below was recorded, and on the 16th the register was 4 degrees below zero. There were only two nights during the month that the mercury did not go below 32 degrees, the freezing point. The temperature for the month was far below the normal for January.

Very Successful Revival.

Rev. J. A. McCord, formerly of this city, who has charge of the First Baptist church at Pinckneyville, Ill., has just closed a three-weeks revival at his church, which resulted in fifty-one additions. The present membership of the church is nearly five hundred.

Pension Tax $1.75 Per Capita.

Washington, February 5.—The pension appropriation bill carrying about $153,000,000 passed the House Saturday by a vote of 245 to 33, after several Southern Democrats had demanded a roll call vote. A provision excluding pensioners who live out of the United States was defeated by 160 to 133. The bill abolishes seventeen pension agencies which have been maintained in different cities.

A Splendid Tonic.

Cora, Ky.—Mrs. Iva Moore, of this place, says, "I was an invalid, I could hardly walk. I tried Cardui, and was greatly relieved. It is a splendid tonic. I have recommended Cardui to many friends, who tried it with good results." Testimony like this comes unsolicited, from thousands of earnest women who have been benefited by the timely use of that successful tonic medicine, Cardui. Purely vegetable, mild, but reliable, Cardui well merits its high place in the esteem of those who have tried it. It relieves women's pains, and strengthens weak women. It is certainly worth a trial. Your druggist sells Cardui.

Veteran Loses Leg.

After being through the civil war as an aide on Gen. Lee's staff without receiving a wound, Col. Beverly Winfred Wrenn lost his left leg in New York as the result of stubbing his toe a month ago. Blood poisoning developed, and it was found necessary to amputate the limb just below the thigh. Despite his advanced years the colonel stood the operation well, and it is believed that he will recover.

Was Buried Here.

Bowling Green, Ky., Feb. 3.—Mrs. Lucy S. Mast, after a lingering illness, died at her home in this city. She was born in Hopkinsville September 9, 1850. She had resided in this city for the past eighteen years, with the exception of three years, when she made her home in Hopkinsville. The remains were taken to Hopkinsville for interment Sunday.

Greatness of Gotham.

A reminder of what a large city New York has become is afforded by the statement that the Borough of the Bronx is exceeded in population by only eight cities in the United States, it numbering more than 430,000 inhabitants at the last census. It also appears that there are nine states in the Union, each of which possesses less population than that fast growing section of the metropolis, which is now agitating for home rule.—Springfield Union.

WAS NO FAULT OF HIS

Pioneer Californian Explains How He Came Into Possession of Gambling House.

When I was in California in the wild and woolly '70s," said the man who is now perfectly respectable, "I was the owner of a gambling house."
He allowed one minute and thirty-nine seconds for horror and the expression passed. Then he resumed:
"I assure you that it was through no desire of my own. It came about this way:

"Back in those days people weren't particular in California about the company they kept, so I was thrown in with all sorts of chaps about whom I asked no questions. And one day, when I was seated in a restaurant partaking of supper, one of these casual acquaintances dashed into the place in a violent hurry and cast his eye around till it lighted on me. He rushed over to where I was seated.

"'Dave,' he said, 'lend me fifty dollars. I have to leave town—just as quick as I possibly can.'

"I handed him the money. He seized it and made for the door on the double-quick. On the way he turned.

"'You'll never see me again,' he announced. 'I leave you my business in payment of the debt.' He mentioned his business address. 'Run around there after supper and take charge,' he added. With that he vanished.

"Five minutes later a posse arrived, expressing a desire to lynch him. But he had made his get-away.

"Finishing my supper I walked to the address my acquaintance had given me and found that it was—a gambling house."

HOW THEY CARE FOR GUESTS

Conveniences of New York Hotels Show Great Consideration Given to Comfort of Ladies.

New York hotels may charge high prices for their restaurant and dining room service, but they are more than generous in some of the conveniences they furnish their women guests.
Dressing rooms are equipped with the finest of soaps, the most delicate of toilet powders, ice water, abundance of hand towels of choice linen, hairpins, pins and cold cream, all for the free use of the fair. There are hand mirrors and whisk brooms galore and even hair brushes and combs, if one cares to use them. That nobody ever does is apparent from their impeccable newness. There is always a neat maid in attendance, who will furnish needle and thread for a consideration and even help you with your hair or mend your glove if it has played you false in an hour of need.

In one of the most fashionable of these benevolent hostesses a neat device is well worthy of imitation. It is a small celluloid box or jar with a hole in the cover. The box is filled with fine, white absorbent cotton, which is accessible through the opening. This is to be used in applying powder to the face instead of the customary powder puff. The guest picks out her little piece of cotton, powders her benign countenance and then discards
the scrap when she is through with it.
The idea is eminently sanitary and shows what careful consideration this hotel gives to every item affecting the welfare of its guests. Above the dressing table is a card bearing the significant inscription, "The conveniences of this room are for the use of paying guests only."

Gone to Stay.

Booth Tarkington was telling stories to a group of college graduates in a New York club, when one of the party suddenly inquired: "What has become of Davis?"

"He has gone out of town on business for a few days, I guess," replied another of the party.

"He has gone for a long while," observed Mr. Tarkington, with a smile.
"Davis is one of those men who leave unmistakable evidence of their purposes. Whenever Davis goes away to stay a long period he takes with him an old mouth organ, which he loves dearly to play while he occasionally nibbles at gingerbread. I have made an investigation of Davis' room, and have found that the mouth organ disappeared with him. The presence or absence of that instrument is enough to tell me what Davis' plans are."

The party learned soon after that Davis had left for Wisconsin to reside permanently.

Growth of St. Petersburg.

That St. Petersburg is rapidly growing in population is evidenced by the census taken in December, 1910, which showed the population, including certain suburban villages formerly not covered, to be 1,907,708. It is pre-eminently an "office town" and also a seaport for six or eight months of the year.

The principal industry is the manufacture of cotton textiles, although its advantage as a port of entry for the interior is gaining recognition. A line of steamers has been established to Libau, connecting there with a trans-Atlantic line to New York. This enables American shippers to send goods direct to this port without the delays of transshipment in foreign ports.

Didn't Get Across.

First Omaha Man (in surprise)—
What! Back already? Why, I thought you were going to see Europe?
Second Omaha Man (cheerfully)—
So did I, but it seems that New York saw me first.—Puck.

Thrane's Emergency Call

By A. Maria Crawford

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

The telephone bell rang insistently and Dr. Marshall Thrane threw down a book on abdominal surgery and turned indifferently to the instrument.

"Yes, this is Dr. Thrane. Automobile accident? Call Dr. Gates. I am very busy."

Thrane loved his profession and the life about being busy was his first act of disloyalty. Although a young man of thirty, he was considered the leading surgeon, certainly the most successful one, in the city.

On this particular evening he was not disposed to help humanity, for the world had gone wrong and the bitterness of his first sorrow had made him morose and sulky. His engagement to the beautiful Eileen Hunt, three months before, had made him immensely happy. She seemed possessed of the tact and democratic attitude toward the masses that go to make a successful and helpful wife for a professional man. The quarrel had occurred two days before, yet he was still ignorant of the cause.

They had gone to the country club for dinner and he had thought to himself at the table that the girl had been blessed with every feminine attraction of beauty and charm. And now within two months of their wedding day, they had quarreled. Over what? Dr. Thrane closed his eyes and for the hundredth time tried to recall the exact conversation.

They had been discussing love. The topic was natural, for there had been a full moon shining on the river before the clubhouse and the soft strains of the waltz from Salome had reached them from the ballroom.

What was it he had said? Something about the moon making a man say foolish things, he remembered. Then she had grown strangely quiet and when he tried to penetrate her silence and learn the cause, she had told him that probably he had been foolish when he proposed to her; it was moonlight then, she reminded him coolly. All his protestations to the contrary proved vain and useless. He had made the remark because he believed it to be a true statement and she had fortunately been clever enough and quick enough to see that he hoped it would be taken as a personal intimation of his attitude toward her. Argument was plainly useless and in a great and overwhelming silence they motored home at high speed, ignoring the beauty of the night and the voiceless things that breathed of love through the fragrant darkness.

Two days had passed slowly. He was too proud to make advances when he had been innocent of her charge against him. He had proven his love in every known way and he concluded that she was evidently grasping at any petty reason as an excuse for breaking her engagement to him.

Again the telephone rang sharply and Dr. Thrane answered. "Yes, this is Dr. Thrane. . . Who wants me? . . . The people hurt in the automobile accident? . . . Who are they? . . . I will be there in five minutes."

Somebody at the Hunts had been hurt. He summoned his sleepy chauffeur and was soon on the way, a fear growing in his heart that it might be Eileen. How would she receive him? Would she speak? A dozen questions presented themselves as he hurried on to his patient. It was more than probable that her brother Bob had been injured.

He hurried up the steps and found Mr. Hunt holding open the door. His worst fears were confirmed when the older man said, "Come in, Marshall. Eileen was thrown from a car. She fainted, but I think they have brought her around."

"Eileen wanted us to send for Dr. Gates, but of course we didn't want to take any chances, for we didn't know how badly she might be hurt, so I had them telephone for you, Marshall."

"This is no time for personal feeling," said the young surgeon sternly, his heart aching at sight of the girl's white face and twitching hands. "Some hot water, please."

"My ankle is hurt, Marshall," said the girl.

"All right, I'll make you comfortable in a few minutes," he assured her as he slipped a tablet into a tiny glass of hot water. "Close your eyes," he ordered as he sat down beside her and pushed back the covers from her round, white arm.

"I will stay with her for a while," Mrs. Hunt. Go and get some rest," he told her mother when he had bound up the girl's sprained ankle and made her forget her pain.

While Eileen slept Thrane idly picked up a magazine on a table near him. It fell open where a telegram had been thrust in. The words on the yellow slip seemed to leap into the mind of the man against his will. It was addressed to Eileen Hunt. "Expect to sail for Japan the first. Can you go with me? Wire at once."

Thrane looked at the girl, then back again at the telltale slip of paper. She had precipitated their quarrel because it was necessary to find some excuse for breaking her engagement to him. Who was Tom?

At the same time that Eileen awakened, her mother came in, thanking Thrane profusely for allowing her a few hours of sleep. The young surgeon was merely professionally courteous when he declared that it was nothing more than he should have done under the circumstances. He hoped that his patient would rest well and he would look in on her some time during the day, he said, and picking up his bag, without a word to the girl, left the room.

His quiet acceptance of changed conditions hurt the girl's pride. She had had a sufficient amount of time in which to regret her folly and she was ready for Thrane to pave a pleasant way for her confession, but the young surgeon came and went daily, coolly, impersonally professional.

It was late Sunday afternoon when Thrane came in to see Eileen. It had been a strenuous day for him and he dropped into a chair and sat silent, unmindful of the efforts of callers to interest him in the general conversation. In a short time he rose to go and Eileen beckoned to him.

"I want you to wait until these people go, please. I have something for you. It is your birthday, you know."

"All right," he said, "provided you won't open up the wound. It's too fresh a hurt and always will be for that matter to bear any unnecessary probing."

She knew then that his apparent indifference was a mask to hide his love and hurt pride, and her heart sank in her body for sheer joy.

"I promise," she answered lightly, "not to hurt."

When they were alone, he moved his chair so that he could watch her face in the light from the west window. She was going to tell him about Tom and her trip to Japan, he reflected, and braced himself for the ordeal.

"I had this made for you, Marshall," she said, and slipped a velvet case toward him along the arm of her invalid chair.

He opened it and there was a locket set with diamonds.

"For me—now?" he asked, wonderingly.

"Yes, open it," she commanded.

He pressed the spring and her own face smiled up at him.

"Is this rosemary—for remembrance?"

"Oh, Marshall, can't you understand? Don't you see?" cried the girl seeing the shadow on his face.

He looked up then and stumbled toward her blindly. "What does it mean?" he urged. "I've suffered enough, Eileen."

Her arms went round him at sight of his pain. "It means that I—that I can't give you up."

"But what about Tom and Japan?" he questioned, afraid of his new happiness.

"How did you know about that?"

"I read the telegram the night you were hurt. I opened a magazine and the words on the blank just flashed up at me. I didn't mean to read."

"Tom was my chum at college. She was named for her father."

"How I have hated the poor innocent!" laughed the man all weariness of the flesh dissipated by his changed spirit.

"This week has been terrible, Marshall. I wanted to die."

"When anybody wants to die, sweetheart," said Thrane happily, "it is better not to put in an emergency call for me."

Finding a Home.

For every life a cat has there seems a way to find the animal a good home. One of the ways was sprung on a policeman who patrolled Ninety-seventh street the other morning at daybreak. In a basement area he noticed a tightly sealed willow basket bobbing up and down, apparently of its own volition in front of a basement door. "Baby," grunted the policeman, although even he could not see how a baby small enough to go into the basket could cause such violent commotion. Cautiously he raised the corner of the lid and saw not a baby, but a cat. Accompanying the cat was a note.

"Please give Ethelbert a good home. He is a fine mouse. We are leaving town and cannot take him."

The policeman aroused the cook. Presently the whole family appeared. "It's up to you," said the officer. "Ethelbert is a fine looking and he behaves like a gentleman. Do you want him?"

"We will keep him," said the housekeeper, "but what a funny way to dispose of a cat. Why didn't they give him away or sell him if they didn't want to turn him adrift?"

"I guess," said the policeman, "they thought he'd find a better home this way."

Dr. Hall is a native of Christian county and his wife also is a native of Kentucky. She was formerly Miss Little Gunn, of Cadiz.

MRS. J. F. DAGG

Venerable Widow of Rev. J. F. Dagg Passes Away.

Mrs. Rosalie Ellen Dagg, the venerable widow of Rev. J. F. Dagg, died at her home on Virginia street at four o'clock yesterday morning, in the 55th year of her age. Her health had been feeble for some time. She became suddenly worse Saturday and gradually sank to a peaceful end.

Mrs. Dagg's maiden name was Hurley and she was born in London, England, in 1827 and came to America about 1847. While she lived in Philadelphia she was married to Rev. J. F. Dagg and resided with her husband in Georgia, and Alabama, before coming to Hopkinsville more than 35 years ago. Her husband died about 15 years ago. She is survived by six children, Mrs. John B. Trice, Mrs. Kate Waller, Mr. J. H. Dagg, Mrs. Sarah Miller, Mrs. Clayton Richards and Miss Rosalie Dagg. The funeral will be preached at the Baptist church this afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. C. M. Thompson, pastor of the Baptist church of which she was a life time member. The interment will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Mrs. Dagg was noted for her piety and goodness. She was one of the best of women whose lovely christian character and many deeds of kindness endeared her to all who knew her.

BUY YOUR GROCERIES AT FORBES' IN 1912.

Why not make this one of your "resolutions" for the new year? You want to save all you can, of course; that's why we suggest that you come and try trading with us once. There are other reasons too---and they are almost as important as the saving proposition. For instance---we have the newest and freshest stock of groceries in town, no old shelf-worn, dusty, dirty stuff; we buy in the largest quantities and pay spot cash for same. And as to our prices, although we "don't raise much fuss" about it, WE ALWAYS MEET COMPETITION on anything in our line. Now if you don't believe we do this, call us up at any time and see. We could give you many other reasons why we are "just as nice" as the other fellows, but we'd rather show you. So come give us a trial anyway.

$3.50 Recipe Free For Weak Men.

Send Name and Address Today
---You Can Have it Free and
Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, falling memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes---without any additional help or medicine---that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men and I am convinced it is the surest acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together. I think I owe it to my fellow men to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures, may stop dragging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest-acting restorative, up-building, SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 3715 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this---but I send it entirely free.

CITY COUNCIL

Held a Short Session Friday Night, Not Finishing Its Business.

The Council was in session less than an hour Friday night, adjourning when the fire was announced. The budget of accounts was allowed, the street lighting bills and other accounts, except some held up for discussion.

At the request of James Bass, col. his lot on West Seventh street, a part of the old West place, was taken into the city by ordinance.

A protest was heard against the Mayor's refusal to issue permits for colored restaurants on West Seventh street, but the order was allowed to stand.

The Hopkinsville Water Co. applied for a new franchise for enlarging the plant. The ordinance was referred to the Corporations Committee.

The Mayor announced that enough of the High School Bonds had been sold to meet the present needs of the Building Committee.

ENCOURAGING BEGINNING

Of Evangelistic Services at First Presbyterian Church.

The revival services which were begun at the First Presbyterian church last Sunday morning and will continue during this week, if not longer, bids fair to result in much good.

The Pastor, Rev. E. B. Landis, preached two powerful sermons last Sunday. His text in the morning was "It is I," and at night his text was "Is it I?" The attendance was large, considering the cold weather and the interest was more than is usually manifest at the initial services of evangelistic meetings.

The Singer, Rev. Wallace Clift, was present and evinced his great capability as a soloist and chorus leader. He has a wonderfully strong voice and his solos were rendered in an admirable manner. He is greatly gifted in prayer and will be of great help in the conduct of the meeting.

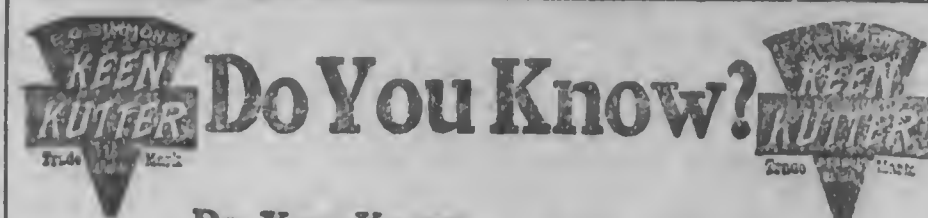

Services every afternoon, excepting probably, Saturday, at 2:30 and at night at 7 o'clock. Everybody is most cordially invited.

She'll Make Good Wife.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Miss Lois Edmonds, 11 years old, Iowa's champion breadmaker, has left Chicago, for Washington, where she will bake a loaf of bread for President Taft. Despite her youth, Miss Edmonds wrested this honor from 1,400 other contestants. With her are ten Iowa school boys, each a champion corn raiser in his own county. The children are being sent to Washington by the Iowa Congressmen. All were awarded prizes last year as champions.

Suits For $10,000.

A negro named Ben Salter, who was driven out of Montgomery, Ala., by a mob, suspected of being implicated in the shooting of two white men, has turned up in Pensacola, Fla., and has brought seven $10,000 suits against seven men he claims were in the mob. Salter's two sons and son-in-law are now in the penitentiary for the same crime of which the old man was accused, and a third son "mysteriously disappeared" soon after the trouble.
